In order to facilitate the organization and edition of the collection of articles, please observe the certain article design requirements. Do not use any footnotes for referring to the literature. The list of references must be organized in alphabetical order at the end of the article - first the sources in Latvian, Lithuanian, German, English or French (together), then in Russian. Only sources that are quoted or referenced in the text should be listed in the list of references. In the case of quoting or paraphrasing, the reference in the text should be indicated as follows: "Quotation" (Geske, Grinfelds 2006, 55); paraphrase (Geske, Grinfelds 2006). If the reference is made to more than one source, then: "Quote" (Brown 1994, 96; Steinig, Huneke 2004, 155); paraphrase (Brown 1994, 96; Steinig, Huneke 2004). The article must be designed according to the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (APA, 6th Ed., 2009).

Tables, figures, pictures, etc. need to be submitted for publication in black & white (if not created by the author, the reference to the primary source must be specified). Tables and charts that are designed in Microsoft Excel programme, must be submitted in a separate file using Microsoft Office 2007 or its more recent version; and tables, figures and pictures, as well as their titles and legends, must be editable. When inserting tables, figures or pictures in the text of the article, please provide its title and/or description, as well as a number, also specifying the name of the file where it can be found.
